

ABSTRACT

 The invention relates to a power cable having a conductive material core and at least one covering layer, characterized in that said covering layer is constituted essentially of a material comprising an inorganic compound of sheet structure and an organic compound inserted between the layers of said inorganic compound.
